

The Daily Courant.

Thursday, March 7. 1706.

London, March 7.

IN Yesterday's Courant was incerted Part of a Relation of the Ceremonies observ'd at the Coronation of King Stanislaus and his Confort at Warsaw, the 4th of October last: The rest of that Relation is as follows.

THE King and Queen being return'd to the Castle, went into the great Hall, where the Bishop of Caminieć made a Speech to them in the Name of the Senators and the Nobility. The Treasurer Sapieha answer'd it, in the Name of their Majesties: Which done the Senators and the Nobility had the honour to kiss their Majesties Hands.

In the Hall where their Majesties din'd were Three Tables, the Middlemost being Square and rais'd some steps higher than the other Two, at that Table sat their Majesties and with them the Ambassadors of Sweden; the Principal Officers of the Kingdom waiting on them.

The Table on the Right was for the Senators and Deputies, and the other for the Ladies, Officers, and other Persons of Quality, as well Swedes as Poles.

Prince Alexander Sobieski was not present at this Solemnity, being retir'd to his Seat at Villanova, not so much out of fear of irritating King Augustus against the Two Princes his Brothers that are his Prisoners, as to avoid all dispute with the Swedish Ambassadors who had beforehand signify'd to him, that at such a Ceremony and at the King's Table they could not allow him to sit above them. For the same Reason the Princess the King's Mother was absent likewise.

The King and Queen rising from Table, were reconducted to the Pallace of Belinsky; all the Persons of Quality attending them thither.

The next Day, their Majesties were entertain'd by Count Horn Ambassador of Sweden, and in the Evening return'd to the Pallace, where the Nuptials of the Castellan of Mezeriz with one of the Ladies of the Court were celebrated with great Pomp; the Marriage Ceremony being perform'd by the Archbishop of Lemberg in the Apartment of the King's Mother. The King and Queen sup'd in the great Gallery in publick, the new marry'd

Couple having the Honour to sit at the Table with them. There was another large Table for the Senators, Ladies, Deputies, Generals, and other Officers Swedes and Poles; and other Tables were spread in the great Apartment of the Marshal for divers other Ladies and Gentlemen.

Supper being over their Majesties went into another Room, where was a Ball: Their were only 2 Chairs for their Majesties, the rest not being allow'd to sit. The King danc'd first with the Bride and then with the Queen; after which the rest of the Company had Liberty to Dance. The Queen retir'd at 11 a Clock and the King an Hour after.

'Tis to be observ'd that of all the particular Ceremonys usually perform'd at the Coronation of the Kings of Poland, none were omitted at this Coronation, except such as were deem'd to be of the least Importance; among which is reckon'd that of throwing Medals to the People by the Treasurer: So also the Place of Coronation, which has usually been Cracow, was judg'd a thing indifferent. The Primate generally us'd likewise to anoint the Kings and place the Crown upon their Heads, but there are Examples of other Bishops performing that Function when need requir'd: Besides, the Cardinal Primate had sent Word, that being not able to come to Warsaw himself, he consented the Arch-bishop of Lemberg should officiate for him.

Just now came in Her Majesty's Ships the Nottingham and Chatham, and under their Convoy about 20 Sail of Coasters, &c. from Plymouth, Portsmouth, and Topsham: The Nottingham is sailing for the River.
